

Chantal Brazeau, MD

Dr. Brazeau has been a faculty member of New Jersey Medical School since 1995 where she is Professor of Family Medicine and Psychiatry. She has served as Director of Medical Student Education and Interim Chair of the Department of Family Medicine.

She has served as Assistant Dean for Faculty Vitality at New Jersey Medical School since 2016 and assumed that role at Robert Wood Johnson Medical School in January 2020. She was announced as the inaugural Chief Wellness Officer at Rutgers Biomedical and Health Sciences in December 2019.

Since 1995, she has taught about professional well-being, conducted research and presented at national and international venues on this topic. Her seminal article on matriculating medical student distress has become a turning point in the field.
