

Elise Barry, MS, CFRE

Since 2012, Elise has served as the Chief Executive Officer of the New Jersey Pharmacists Association, working with pharmacists in multiple practice settings that include independent, compounding and chain pharmacies, hospitals, long-term care facilities, and industry. She is adjunct faculty and a preceptor for pharmacy students from seven schools of pharmacy in three states, mentoring students in legislative advocacy and association management for professional organizations. Elise is a graduate of Boston College, she holds a master's degree from Pratt Institute, and earned a post-graduate certificate in non-profit management from New York Medical College and Fordham University

She is an accomplished association executive with a record of achievement in developing and leading high-performing teams, assuming responsibility for initiatives of significant scope, and delivering results with the highest standards of integrity.

Elise is a graduate of Boston College, and she holds a master's degree from Pratt Institute. In addition, she earned a post-graduate certificate in non-profit management from New York Medical College and Fordham University